Rock 'n' Roll journalist Holly George-Warren returns for talk

♣ The Asheboro native who has become one of the country's preeminent music journalists will speak at a Friends of the Library program at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 29, at the Randolph Arts Guild's Sara Smith Self Gallery.

Holly George-Warren

Holly George-Warren's talk, entitled "From Gene Autry to Woodstock to the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame: A Writer's Musical Journey," is free and the public is invited.

George-Warren, daughter of the late Martha and Alvis George, grew up raiding the bins at Archie Burkhead's Record Shop for the latest sounds. Now she has scores of books and articles to her name, not to mention a Grammy nomination.

Her latest effort is The Road to Woodstock, written with Michael Lang, the concert's promoter. Find more about Holly at www.hollygeorgewarren.com.

Tazewell shares world's beauty

♣ Illustrator, author and educator Barbara Tazewell strives to present the world in a way that encourages others to see in new and exciting ways.

Barbara Tazewell

Tazewell will share her vision in a Friends of the Library program at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 13 at the Asheboro library. The program is free and the public is invited.

An Akron, OH, native and 20-year Asheboro resident, Tazewell taught French and English at Akron University, the Akron public schools, St. Augustine College, Bennett College and Randolph Community College.

She's author and illustrator of the children's flip book Ola, the Water Bearer, and illustrator of the Jamaican-themed Jelly Bread and Water Juice, written by her daughter-in-law Lora Tazewell. Many of her illustrations use origami paper or fabric printed on paper to form pictures.

Librarian goes to Caregiver College

♣ As part of the Extension Department's outreach service to seniors, librarian Betty Bunting participated in the Caregiver College at Randolph Community College for the second consecutive year.

Caregiver College presenters act out a scenario.

She demonstrated the actions of someone who is battling the disease and explained how it progresses. She provided many helpful hints on how to care for a loved one suffering with dementia.

In addition to Snow's presentation, a skit provided detailed information on services available in Randolph County for the elderly, workshops on sleep disorders, safety in the home, Medicare help, costs involved with nursing home care and other subjects relevant to the aged and their caregivers. A handbook of information and resources was compiled and is available for patron use at the Reference Desk of the library.

She was responsible for securing the vendors for the event. Held February 20, Caregiver College is a collaborative effort among Randolph Community College, Randolph Hospital, Hospice of Randolph County, Cross Road Retirement Community, and Randolph Public Library. Many professionals gave of their time to make this day a success. Attending were representatives of Randolph Senior Adults Association, RCATS, home health agencies, Piedmont Triad Council of Government and others who served as vendors. These groups are dedicated to seeking the best care and help available for the older people in our community. Caregiver College is open to everyone but is designed especially for those who are caring for an aged loved one.

Teepa Snow, an occupational therapist currently working as a dementia care and education specialist, was the guest speaker.

The event drew 115 people. Betty felt that the college was "vital for anyone who works with older members of the community on a regular basis. It provided information on all the issues with which the aged are dealing in a forthright manner while giving practical tips on communicating and interacting with seniors. It definitely will help the Extension Department in our mission to serve the aged."

Next year's Caregiver's College is planned for Saturday, February 19. Mark your calendars now so you will not miss this important community service event!

Browse library shelves at your computer

♣ A new feature in the library's catalog lets you see what's on the shelf next to a book you have searched — right on the computer.

Called Shelf Browse, the new capability is part of the LibraryThing for Libraries package of enhancements that provides user-generated reviews, similar titles and tags. The expandable Shelf Browse icon appears between Copy/Holding Information and Similar Books on the catalog page, and shows, based on library call numbers, a few items to the left and right of the one you have selected.

You can click on one of these images to view the item's information, scroll left or right for more nearby titles, or click the Full Screen button to see a wider range. In the full screen mode, you also can track left or right to move along the shelf.

The image above shows books surrounding Thomas Friedman's The World is Flat (top center). Clicking on a book jacket image will take you to the item's page in the library catalog.

Renowned illustrator's work donated

♣ The Children's Room at the Asheboro library has received Jack and the Beanstalk, an original numbered print by Scott Gustafson, as a gift from James and Martha Murray.

Gustafson has illustrated children's books for over 25 years and has also drawn for DreamWorks and the Saturday Evening Post.

The charming print caught Martha Murray's eye years ago, before she had children. When she started bringing her children to the library for storytime, she noticed the need for new art and decided to share one of her favorite artist's work with the community.

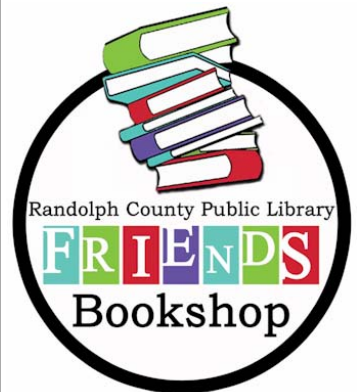

Find the beautifully-framed illustration on the wall as you enter the Children's Room.

Randleman grant

The Randleman Public Library has received a $5,000 from the Dart Foundation for the purchase of books for teens. Employees at the Randleman Dart Container Facility chose the library as recipient of the funds.

Franklinville show

A Slide show tracing the development of Franklinville, including the county's first public library, can be viewed at www.randolphlibrary.org/franklinvillelocation.htm. The slide show was created for presentation at the Piedmont Triad Council of Government's meeting in February.
