Sandra Livingston retires

♣ After a 33-year career with the Ramseur Public Library, and 21 years as library manager, Sandra Livingston retired on June 30.

With a twinkle in her eye and always game for a challenge, Sandra has helped make the library the hub of the Ramseur community.

“I will miss the people,” she says. “It’s amazing what they share. We have been with them through the phases of their lives, happy and sad times alike.... We have seen babies born that later became Story Time mothers. It is the people that bring the library to life.”

Sandra began her library career in 1987 as assistant to librarian Stacy Curtis. In 1999, Stacy retired and Sandra became manager. Now Sandra’s able assistant, Sandy Jarrell, will take over for her. “We could use a lot of adjectives to describe Sandra,” Sandy says. “She has devoted her life to bringing the world to Ramseur through reading. It has been a joy to work alongside her.”

One of those Ramseur kids to whom Sandra brought the world of reading is Hannah Harris, now a staff member at the Franklinville Public Library and a student in the UNC-Greensboro School of Library and Information Studies.

“It’s pretty clear the impact both Sandra and Sandy have had on my life,” Hannah says. “If not for them, I would not have such an intense love of literature and I certainly wouldn’t be interested in a library career.”

Sandra says the biggest change during her 33 years with the library has been the advance of technology. But she was not shy about embracing it — in 2014, the library won an Outstanding Promotional Project Award from the North Carolina Public Library Director’s Association for an initiative in which Sandra and Sandy presented programs at Coleridge Elementary School via Skype.

Sandra says that the pandemic has simplified her retirement plans. “I have dusted off my treadmill and hope to enjoy ‘Five Minutes of Peace’ with a cup of tea in a fancy cup. Music will still be an escape, while shopping will have to wait. New plans are really all about family,” she says.

Sandy observes, “We could take lessons from her on how to get the most for your money, how to set a table, how to decorate, what not to wear and how to put your best foot forward. In life and at the library, she has done it all well and with style.”

Overdrive ebooks return due to startling twist of corporate fate

♣ Overdrive ebooks have returned to the library collection barely three weeks after the library migrated from the Overdrive platform to a competitor, RB Digital.

On June 23, the private equity firm that owns RB Digital, KKR, announced it had acquired Overdrive and would move all RB customers to the Overdrive platform over the next several months.

Until recently, the library purchased ebooks from Overdrive and e-audiobooks from RB Digital. Each vendor charges a fee for use of its platform, in addition to the cost of ebooks or e-audiobooks purchased by the library.

Study over the past year indicated that by consolidating ebooks and e-audiobooks onto the RB Digital platform, the library would save almost $10,000 per year that it could apply to new ebook purchases.

The change was not without cost, as some popular features available in Overdrive were not available in RB Digital, such as support for early Kindle e-readers.

Website features library resources for understanding racism and anti-racism

♣ “Understanding Racism and Anti-Racism,” a new library website, features books and other resources that explore issues of race in America, both currently and historically.

Available at www.randolphlibrary.org/antiracism, the site also includes videos of recent library programs on the topic, including presentations by Asheboro City Council member Katie Snuggs, retired Randleman educator Eldora Allen, authors

On June 1, the switch was completed, although it took a week or so for large portions of the collection to become available on the RB Digital platform.

With KKR’s announcement, the library asked to be moved back to the Overdrive platform as soon as possible.

Currently, both RB and Overdrive ebooks are available. Newly-published ebooks can be found in the RB collection, as the library has been purchasing only for RB since the plan to move was finalized earlier this year.

Both platforms offer convenient apps for ebook access: look for the RB Digital app and for Overdrive’s Libby app in your app store.

The timeline for moving the library’s collection exclusively to Overdrive has not been determined as of this writing, so ebooks on both platforms will remain available for the time being.

Visit www.randolphlibrary.org/digitalmedia to learn about library ebooks, e-audiobooks and e-magazines, or call the library at 336-318-6803.

Thomas Rush and Mark Kemp, and an oral history with Bryant Headen, Asheboro’s first African American police officer.

Resource carousels on the site direct readers to nonfiction and fiction books for adults, teens and children on topics of anti-racism, social justice and black history.

The site synthesizes work by library staff member Jessi Bowman for a project in her coursework at the UNC-Greensboro School of Library and Information Studies.

Virtual Book Club

Join us for a book club using the library’s Go-To-Meeting online conference tool, 6:30-8 p.m. Thursday, July 30. Talk about 1-2 books you’ve read recently, and join a free-for-all discussion at the end.

You will need a computer with sound and a microphone to participate; you can also join by phone.

To sign up, contact Meghan Carter, mcarter@randolphlibrary.org. You will receive a link to the conference.

Curbside printing

The library is now offering curbside pickup of computer printouts at four locations. Anyone needing to print can call the Asheboro, Archdale, Liberty or Seagrove libraries to make arrangements.

Library staff will provide an email address to which documents can be sent. Staff will print the document and ready it for pickup. The 20-cent per page fee will be charged to the individual’s library card for collection when the library reopens. For those without cards, sign-up by phone is available.

Access
Ancestry.com
free thru July 31

Free remote access to Ancestry Library Edition, the library version of Ancestry.com, has been extended through July 31. Go to <https://tinyurl.com/randrm> to log in with your library card and PIN.

Ancestry Library Edition is usually available only at the library, but Ancestry.com is offering access from anywhere during the pandemic.
